Dear Sir

Please find attached our earlier response to the Emerging Strategy Public Consultation.

There is one significant change since formulating the table of responses to SDC in November 2018. This is in relation to the pupil product ratio we currently use to calculate the number of pupils arising from new housing developments.

Currently this is set as indicated in the table below

	<90 dwellings	>90 dwellings	Flats
Pre-school	7.3	8.1	2.2
Primary	26.7	28.0	2.7
Secondary *(11-16)	12.4	15.2	0.3
16-18*	1.6	1.9	0.2

However, in light of increasing demand from new housing, we have recently commissioned an independent review of our pupil yields and this has evidenced that the number of children arising from new developments has increased substantially.

We are therefore amending our pupil ratios and will be applying the new pupil yields from January 2019. The suggestion is that there will be two pupil yields one will apply to larger strategic developments of over 400 dwellings

In this instance the proposed ratios for each 100 dwellings will be:-

- 26 Pre-school children
- 42 primary school children
- 21 secondary school children (11-15)
- 1 post 16 children (16-18)

It is also proposed that an alternative pupil yield will apply to smaller housing developments

In this instance the proposed ratios for each 100 dwellings will be:-

- 23 Pre-school children
- 37 primary school children
- 19 secondary school children (11-15)
- 1 post 16 children (16-18)

This change to the PPR's will of course require a greater number of school places than indicated in the original feedback. We will keep you informed to the process for this change

Please contact me should you require any further information

Kind regards
